Description for Company Registration

[Examples: Veracity Legal Services Private Limited or Veracity Legal Services Limited]

With reference to the above stated subject; we have to state that we provide our services for getting your Company Registered.

The Definition and Types of Companies are as follows:

What is Company?

A company or corporation (the words have the same meaning) is a legal entity that is separate from its members. When you form a company, you form an imaginary legal person which can hold and dispose of property, take legal action and sign documents. Because of this separate legal entity a company can have assets and liabilities and make profits and losses quite separately from its members.

You may form, or already be in a company for a number of reasons including:

- To protect yourself against liability for business debts;
- To take advantages of company taxation rates; and
- The flexibility of membership that is provided by a company structure.

So what exactly is a company and what are its advantages compared to those of a sole proprietorship or partnership?

The advantages of incorporating (forming a company) compared with a partnership/proprietorship are:

- Your liability for the company's debts is limited;
- Changes in membership do not affect the company; (this is called perpetual succession);
- Members can be employed by the company; and
- Taxation rates are more favourable (though you will have to consult your accountant about whether this provides an overall benefit)

Types of Companies

There are a number of different types of companies that can be formed in India. There are only three types of companies that can be registered under the Companies Act.

The basic difference between a Public and Private company is explained below:

Public Companies

Public Companies are permitted by law to raise money from the public by offering their shares for sale, usually by listing them on the share market. Some public companies are not listed on the share market, but most are. You can recognize a public company because it must put the word 'Limited' or the abbreviation 'Ltd' after its name.

Private Companies

A Private Company is usually smaller than a public company. Private Companies are not permitted to raise money by selling shares to the public (although they can convert to public company status by 'floating' their shares). You can recognize a Private Company by the abbreviation 'Pvt Ltd' or 'Private Limited' that comes after its name.
